

SCREEN SCENE

Whatever your screening or fencing needs may be, bamboo is the answer

Looking for a natural way to add privacy or screen your garden? If so, Bamboo Habitat's bamboo screens are ideal. These easy-to-manage, 1.2m-wide screens can be joined for a continuous, seamless look or framed for a more structured appearance. They can be cut down into smaller sections (to create a gate, for example) and they can be made to follow a curved line, perfect for use around circular objects, such as water tanks.

Finished using traditional firing methods, the Smoked range is Bamboo Habitat's largest.

Smoked screens have a wonderful, earthy scent and a scorched, woody-brown tone, which is the perfect natural backdrop to plantings or art. If you prefer a more traditional look, the Natural Delta is the style for you. You can let it weather to a soft blonde/grey tone or enhance the light colour with Bamboo Habitat's exclusive Bamboo Honey UV-tinted marine varnish.

Bamboo Habitat offers customers a plethora of choices. The Delta style, for example, is available in three heights (1.5m, 1.8m and 2.1m) and two colour options, Natural and Smoked. Then there is the Smoked Moku, with an upmarket hardwood timber detail (which stands 1.8m high) and the Smoked Congo, which has a staggered top (available in two heights, 1.8m and 2.1m).

For quality, all screens are made from full, round bamboo poles (not split) and are strung internally with 3mm galvanised wire, ensuring structural soundness for around 15 years.

For convenience, Bamboo Habitat offers an installation service in the Sydney metropolitan area and on the NSW South Coast, and if you can't collect from the Sydney warehouse, an Australia-wide, door-to-door freight service is also available.

If you want to complement your screening with garden decor or water features, Bamboo Habitat can assist customers to buy direct from its sister business in Bali or coordinate orders/shipments on their behalf.

BAMBOO HABITAT

Phone (02) 4294 1385

Email info@bamboohabitat.com.au

Website bamboohabitat.com.au